Capt. von Haselocher came over from Shakan on the last trip of the Peerless, and with wife and baby, who had been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Carlyon the past two weeks, left for their home at Ketchikan. The Capt. and his partner have lately finished building some houses at Shakan and Marble Creek.

Charley Darwell goes to work for Mr. John Mantle. Charley is an expert cooper.

When the steamer Mabel went onto the rocks, near Old Town, a few weeks ago, J. A. Mason fell and cracked a couple of his ribs, and it still gives him no little pain and trouble.

Col. C. E. Nelson, manager of the Marble Creek properties, was a passenger south on the Dolphin, on his way to his old home in the west. The Col. has been in poor health for some time past, and takes a trip with the hope of improving it.

Patrick Loftus went to Ketchikan on the Dolphin.

Robert Reid was a passenger on the Dolphin for Seattle.

Mr. C. Roos has gone up the Stikine on a trapping expedition.

H. D. Campbell went to Klawack to build a manse for Rev. Wagner.

Commercial job work of all kinds neatly and quickly done at this office.

The Marion was in at this port Monday for supplies—and she got them.

Hundreds of big, fat king salmon are being caught at Petersburg by trolling.

Ole Johnson has opened a carpenter shop in the room vacated by L. R. Milligan.

The Parallon arrived down Sunday afternoon, loaded to the gunners with salmon.

W. C. Waters is putting up a building just east of his store, and says it will be a meat market.

Attorney Oscar Foote, of Juneau, was a passenger on the last trip of the Humboldt for Ketchikan.

Lauros Milligan is quite at home with his stock of groceries, confectionery, etc., in the Campbell building.

Notices for bids for carrying the mail between Wrangell and the West Coast are to be seen at the post office.

Billy Tooten left last Sunday to join his family at Portland. (Laird Snyder has taken his place on the Peerless.)

George Snyder and Walter Dore went "devil climbing" over on High Island last week, and found plenty of this noted game.

Gordon Hoops arrived down the river Saturday with a salmon on the index finger of the right hand that is giving him much pain.

Townsmen Emory Goodwin last week received the sad intelligence of the death of an only brother, which occurred in Vermont recently.

Jesse Crowell is off with the Broncho, seeking to locate some placer claims that he has in his mind. We hope Jesse will be successful.

Several new names have been added to the SENTINEL list the past week. They all want the Wrangell news—and the SENTINEL furnishes it.

On the last down trip of the Humboldt she took eight big boxes of halibut from Petersburg and six hundred cases of salmon from Tonka.

Judge Gunnison and Clerk Page and Clark and several jurors went from Juneau on the Dolphin to Ketchikan to open court on October 2.

Frank Coulter, Gus Schola and P. Haught went over to the north arm of the Stikine last week and brought home the limit of three days shooting of ducks. They also captured a few geese.

Monday morning Deputy Marshal Grant left by the Ragnild for Kaska, to take before the court at Ketchikan persons who have been transgressing the law by failing to pay their licenses for carrying on business that required it.

Sin Freeman, who spent the past season here as inspector of customs, was a passenger up on the Seattle, having been to the fair at Portland, and stopped off at Wrangell to take a few whiffs at the shrine of Terpi-chore. Sin is looking and feeling fine, and says the fair is the "real thing."

A New Commissioner.

Monday, September 25th, A. V. R. Snyder was appointed by Hon. Royal A. Gunnison, judge of this district, United States commissioner for Wrangell precinct, to succeed W. G. Thomas, resigned. The position is not a new one to Mr. Snyder, he having served as police judge of different towns and justice of the peace at various points below, resigning the latter position when he came to this section four years ago. The appointment was made through spontaneous approval by the people of this section, and the Secretary hopes the people will not be disappointed in the choice they have made. Speaking of the appointment, the Juneau papers say:

"Federal Judge Gunnison today announced the appointment of Col. A. V. R. Snyder, editor of the Wrangell Sentinel, as United States commissioner for the Wrangell District. The appointment will prove popular among the people of that section and in particular will be hailed by the newspaper men who know Col. Snyder to be a royal good fellow. After this newspaper chaps will take off their hats and walk with humble and faltering tread when they invade the sacred precinct of Wrangell. If Snyder ever catches them off he will throw the whole code at the offender. The Dispatch, editorially, says: 'The appointment of a newspaper man as United States commissioner shows that the federal judge has a warm spot in his heart for the profession from which he graduated to the bench. The selection is a very popular one and will reflect credit upon the administration. It is such "takes" as these that throw a little sunshine into the lives of the craft.'"

(Douglas Island News.)
"A. V. R. Snyder, editor and proprietor of the Alaska Sentinel, made a short call at the News office yesterday morning. He has recently received at the hands of U. S. District Judge Gunnison the appointment as U. S. commissioner at Wrangell. Judge Snyder, as he must now be called, will still continue the publication of his interesting paper, advocating the cause of righteousness, and opposing all manner of wickedness in high places. His appointment will meet with the approval of the citizens of Wrangell, of whose cause he and the Sentinel have been earnest and fearless champions. Here's long life to Judge Snyder."

(Daily Record-Mirror.)
"Judge A. V. R. Snyder arrived on the Humboldt and will remain on the same boat carrying with him his commission as United States commissioner at Wrangell, to succeed William G. Thomas, whose resignation was handed in to Judge Gunnison about a month ago."

Board of Equalization.

Notice is hereby given that the Common Council of the Town of Wrangell, Alaska, will meet in the Red Men's building on Front Street in said town, as a Board of Equalization, on Thursday, October 12, and Saturday, October 14, at 2 o'clock, p. m., of said days, and continue in session until 4 o'clock, p. m., of said days; and also on the following Thursday, October 19, and Saturday, October 21, at the hour of 2 o'clock p. m., of said days, and continue in session until 4 o'clock, p. m., of said days, to examine and correct any errors that may be found in the assessment roll for Year 1905.

Any person desiring a reduction on the assessment of his property, shall make and file with the Board of Equalization a written application therefor, verified by his oath, showing the facts upon which it is claimed such reduction should be made.
Wrangell, Alaska, October 5, 1905.
J. E. WORDEN,
Town Clerk.

Dr. S. E. Furry of New York City, who has been a prime mover in the Olympic ring, Co. and who is also interested in the Windy Arm properties, has been making a personal visit to his Alaska investments and while in Wrangell, Sunday, paid us a call. Dr. Furry is highly elated over the outlook at the mines, as he says: "We have one of the greatest properties on earth. Our tramway will be completed by the 25th of October, and everything will be in readiness to take on the rapid route. At the Dr. says over a hundred lots have been sold in Conrad City and that a boom is imminent. SENTINEL is pleased to note the success of this company."

FOR SALE—Blue Fox Ranch, producing the finest quality of furs that go into London market, as can be shown by London sales. The average price of the blue foxes shipped from this ranch for the past four years have brought 21 times above the average price of all skins sold. During the same period it has produced over two thirds of all the prime skins. Island well stocked and is self-sufficient. Persons wishing to buy can have opportunity to investigate before purchasing. No information will be given to anyone except to those wishing in good faith to embark in the business. Address: S. A. PETERSEN, Unalakleet, Alaska.

Mr. W. G. Thomas, who has so ably conducted the office of United States commissioner at this place the past three years, will remain in Wrangell. For the present he will open an office in the Geo. Clark building on Front street and will continue to "keep the books" on general business matters. For the next several years it is Judge Thomas' intention to spend the winters in Wrangell and the summers he will put in his time in the Cassiar country in the interest of mining, as few men in the country are so familiar with that section as he.

Several parties arrived down the Stikine, Saturday last, among whom were Representative Humphreys and Josiah Collins of Seattle, who have been in the interior the past five weeks in quest of big game—and they got it, too—everything but grizzly bear, and these they say they propose to add to their list next year, if they live, and they have no idea of dying before that time. The gentlemen left below on the Dolphin, Sunday.

The old Alki, powder laden, lay at the dock last Friday night. On her way up she had a narrow escape from going to "Davy Jones' locker," as lightning struck one of her masts, knocking it to smithereens, but doing no further damage. Bob Reid says that all that saved the boat was a case or two of Cyrus Noble whiskey, that warbled off the fiery blow.

Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Pittenger of Ketchikan, arrived in town on the Dolphin, and the doctor at once "hung out his shingle" for the practice of his profession. By the way, the doctor was only recently married, and exclaims, "I must not miss the opportunity of extending to the happy couple its wishes for a successful voyage through life."

Mr. C. L. Baskin and another party, of Petersburg, have recently put twenty pairs of blue foxes on Socco Island, just outside of the entrance to the Narrows, in Frederick Sound. It is a delightful point, and no doubt the gentlemen will do well in the venture.

New light on the efficiency of the American law for the restriction of immigration was shed by the debate on the aliens bill in the British House of Commons the other day. The premier, in defending the bill, said that Great Britain had become a sort of sieve through which emigrants entered America. The fit got through and the unfit remained in the British Isles. This applies, of course, only to those who sail from British ports. When Great Britain joins with the United States in prohibiting the entrance of undesirable immigrants it will not be so easy for the countries of continental Europe to dump their incompetents beyond their own boundaries.

It seems impossible for the American public to arouse itself to the point of taking a reasonable and wholesome interest in its own great affairs. It is only in local and sporadic cases, like the uprising in Philadelphia, that one can see even a hint or suggestion of the presence of a sentiment and purpose whose existence in the nation at large is as useful as it is in any locality. It would not be difficult to present a long list of pertinent illustrations of national indifference concerning great national affairs, but one will suffice. The land frauds recently exposed are greater in the aggregate—many times greater—than all other frauds on this nation since the government was created. That is a simple fact, but it is a fact of enormous magnitude. And yet the American people appear to take it as a matter of course, an item in the general order of business.

Physical training has been practically omitted from our curricula, except in the academies and colleges, and even the healthful escape of vitality that was afforded in the old recess yard is now abridged or abolished in dozens of our schools. We do not want to rear a race of anemics. The boy and girl kept crouching over a desk for hours, and kept from sleep at night by the necessity of doing sums, will become flat-chested, nervous, dyspeptic, unless there is an offset of physical activity for certain periods every day. That activity is best assured when there is a well appointed field in the neighborhood where the scholars can run, jump, put the hammer, play ball and engage in sports and games that, while developing the muscles and assuring health to bodily organs, also do their share in training sight, cultivating decision and improving mental resources.

Here is a unique message of optimism. It is from the Wall Street Journal. In discussing the hopeful things of the day this journal catalogues first "material prosperity" and second, "social unrest," that is to say, popular discontent and popular demands for betterment. It says that "somehow the idea has spread that success is another name for conspiracy"—an idea that is certainly justified by recent revelations of high finance. Because the people are demanding a change in business methods and in the laws some timid souls fear the outcome. But the journal concludes: "We take a different view. We regard the social unrest as being quite as much an occasion for optimism as the material prosperity. If the people were corrupt but contented, if they were prosperous but callous to wrong, the situation would indeed be hopeless. But the unrest which seems so alarming in reality is a sign of hope. It means that the consciences of the people are being stirred, that they are demanding a higher code of morality in the administration of business by corporations, and that progress is making toward loftier standards." The diagnosis, though coming from a rather remarkable source, is believed to be a correct one. This financial journal sees that either the demands of the people for "a higher code of morality" and a more equitable administration of law must be realized—or revolution. There will be no revolution because the people are uncorrupted; their consciences are stirred; they demand better methods. And because the people are not calloused and because they are righteously restless under grave wrongs they will bring to pass the things that they demand.

ENGLISH FLOWER GARDENS.

Until Parkinson's Time Flowers Received Little Attention.

Edmund Gosse writes delightfully about the first English flower gardens in Harper's Magazine and of the peculiar ideas of those early gardeners: "The first man who defended the flower garden as having an independent right to exist was John Parkinson. Until his time everybody had made excuses for the cultivation of flowers, as if they were an agreeable but frivolous addition to the serious business of fruit trees, medicinal herbs and kitchen produce. Parkinson, who was born in 1567, was an apothecary by trade, and he had a garden in Long Acre, where nothing greener or fresher than coachbuilders' showrooms is cultivated now. He was the earliest to lay down that there were four kinds of horticultural enclosures, namely, of pleasant and delightful flowers, of kitchen herbs and roots, of simples and of fruit trees, and that the first of these must be held to be no less honorable than the others. He probably had a considerable share in getting the deliberate flower garden introduced, perhaps about 1595, and he was much interested in its forms and definition. A great deal of thought had to be expended upon bordering. It was usual to edge the grass plots with thyme, and when flowers were first grown in open beds germander was used to border them. This was a little shrub, Teucrium, from the rocky shores of the Mediterranean, with grayish-violet blossoms. It could be trained to make a dwarf hedge, and it had a pleasant faint scent. Germander, however, soon went out of fashion, because it was found difficult to keep it neat and trim. Great value was then set on strongly perfumed plants, such as lavender, marjoram, thyme and sage for borderings. But when Parkinson wrote his Paradisus in Sole, a generation later, the latest invention for edging was white or bluish pebbles set up in lines."

Some Object Lessons.

A Massachusetts clergyman stood before his congregation with a dog beside him and talked on the subject of kindness to animals. The innovation made a strong impression, but there is no doubt that it opens up a somewhat dangerous precedent. Will the next Massachusetts clergyman who inveighs against horse racing find it necessary to use a live horse for an object lesson? Or if he discusses on the dangers that surround the devoted missionary in oriental lands, will he feel obliged to illustrate his theme with the tiger of the jungle and the elephant of the foothills?

There are few good things in this life of ours that can't be overdone.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE BROKEN GLASS.

When it was whole, across this mirror What images of strength and beauty passed!
Here was the loveliness of woman glanced,
Of children, too, and only less divine,
The forms of rocks and trees, the glorious shine
Of suns and stars, and wondrously amassed,
The journeying clouds; beneath them, ocean's vast illimitable surge of restless brine.

'Tis shattered now, and all these things and more—Great thoughts, imaginations strong and free—
Are in this glass reflected brokenly: Crazed is the dance upon that polished floor.
Poor useless frame that held this sacred trust, Too soon thou canst not crumble into dust!
—Scribner's.

RESCUED FROM THE ROPE.

I JOINED the Melville Comedy Company at Denver early in the fall of 18—. There were a great many hardships to be endured while playing in the Western territory, but they were lightened for me by the warm friendships I formed with several of the company. I became particularly intimate with Roy Carrington, our "first old man." He had a most engaging personality, and there was always noticeable in his demeanor a sort of gentle sadness, a quiet melancholy, that was hardly in keeping with his real good nature. We were fully aware that it was not the result of disappointed ambition, for we knew he had declined several handsome metropolitan offers, which would have brought him great reward. He seemed to prefer his lot as first old man of our company.

I had many friendly talks with Carrington, but he never touched upon the cause of this peculiarity, and it was not until we reached Leadville that I learned the story of events which had materially changed the current of his life. We were out walking one afternoon and Carrington suggested that we take a stroll through the cemetery.

I laughingly remarked to him that I was not particularly anxious to visit cemeteries, deeming the unavoidable occasions quite sufficient. There was something in his manner, however, which checked my levity, and I remarked, rather more seriously, that on this occasion I waived all objection.
To the cemetery, then, we turned our steps. Carrington was silent until we had passed the gates, when he said:

"Clarke, I wanted to come in here, because I wished to see the grave of a woman I knew."

We walked on in silence for a few rods, when my companion made a detour from the main path. I followed him and soon stood before a small, neat lot, which had a single grave in the center. The grave was marked by a small granite stone, which bore this inscription:

SACRED TO THE MEMORY

of

ALICE PAYNE,

who died

November 14, 18—,

Aged 25 years.

"Who was she?" I asked.

"I'll tell you," he answered with a deep sigh, as he turned and led the way to a rustic bench which was screened from the view of passers-by by a row of tall box-wood. After we had seated ourselves Carrington continued:

"I met Alice Payne five years ago, a few months before her death. I had joined the Baker Dramatic Company, of which she was the leading lady. I was doing leading business then, and of course played opposite to her. She was a refined and well-educated young woman, with one of those sad, sweet faces we sometimes see in pictures and once in a while meet with in reality. She seemed to avoid the society of men, and it was only on a few occasions that she allowed me to escort her from the theater to her hotel. And I think she only permitted it then because the weather was stormy and I had an umbrella, while she had left hers at the hotel."

"We had played for a few months on the Western circuit and at last struck Leadville. We were to play three nights here. On Monday night before we left the theater Miss Payne stopped me on my way to my dressing room. I noticed she was considerably agitated."

"Mr. Carrington," she said, 'will you kindly escort me to the hotel to-night?'
"I replied that it would afford me the greatest pleasure to do so. I hurried into my street dress, but, quick as I was, I found her waiting for me.
We passed out of the theater and started for the hotel, which was about a quarter of a mile away. We had only gone a short distance when we heard footfalls behind us as if some one was shadowing us. I turned and saw a man dodge behind a building. I glanced at Miss Payne, and saw that she had noticed the movements of the man behind us. Her agitation, which had been gradually increasing, now reached its intensity, and she burst into tears.
Her form trembled and I had to support her until we reached the hotel. By this time she had ceased weeping, and asked me to step into the parlor.
There were no occupants other than ourselves."

"Mr. Carrington," she said, turning to me with an anguished look, 'that man is my husband.'

"I was greatly surprised, as I had always been under the impression that she was a single woman. Moreover, I knew she had come from the east somewhere, and this declaration, that a man haunting our footsteps in a far Western town was her husband, was rather startling."

"Then she told me her story. It was the old tale of a deceived woman and a human brute. Her parents had sent her to a Canadian convent to be educated, and while there she had somehow or other in her daily walks made the acquaintance of a dashing French-Canadian named Armand Lasalle. She was fascinated by his handsome appearance, and eloped with him. Her family were greatly incensed and refused to recognize her. It was not long before Lasalle began to show his true nature, and treat her so brutally that she was forced to leave him. After a bitter quarrel, in which he swore to have her life, she fled from him."

"She was too proud to look to her family for assistance. Knowing she had dramatic talent, she went upon the stage. Starting modestly, she had worked her way to her present position. She had never heard anything from Lasalle since the day she had left him until that night, when she was nearly overcome by seeing him leering at her from a front seat, while she was going through her last scene.
That was the reason she had asked me to see her to her hotel. She asked me to keep this story secret. I promised this and assured her of my protection should Lasalle venture to make any trouble. I cautioned her to keep in her room all the next day."

"The next evening, before calling for Miss Payne to take her to the theater, I examined my revolver to see if it was all right. While doing so, it slipped from my hand and fell to the floor. A report followed and a bullet buried itself in the door. I expected every moment a rush of people into my room to see what was the matter.
When this did not occur, I concluded the shot had not been heard on account of the noisy laughter in the street, where a crowd was watching a drunken miner trying to mount a bucking broncho."

"I escorted Miss Payne to the theater and waited to take her back to the hotel after the performance. Miss Payne did not see Lasalle in the house

"THE SIGNAL WAS GIVEN."

that night, but when we were walking the sound of footsteps followed us as on the previous evening.

"I looked back, and instead of dog-ging as before, the man came on almost at a full run for a couple of yards. He had a revolver in his hand. I had hardly time to pull my own, when he stopped short and fired. With a shriek, Miss Payne fell to the ground. Lasalle, for it was he, turned and dashed away in the darkness. I was burning with rage, and forgetting Miss Payne for the moment, I sprang after him. I fired at him once, and thought I must have missed him, as he continued running."

"I do not know how long we ran, but cries and footfalls, which had sounded distinctly behind me, were growing more and more distinct. Lasalle doubled a corner on me, and, turning the same corner, my foot struck an obstruction and I went flying on my face. I lay stunned for a few moments. As I rose to my feet, dazed, rough hands were laid on me and I was dragged back to where Miss Payne was lying. By this time I had recovered my senses fully. I broke from my captors and knelt down beside her.
One look was sufficient."

"My God! I cried, 'she is dead!'
"Yes," said a rough voice behind me, 'and you're the man that killed her!'

"Then I realized the horror of my position. The shots fired had alarmed the crowd of miners, who poured out of the different saloons to see a woman lying dead on the ground and a man running away."

"My protests were of no avail, as circumstances were against me. I was searched and my revolver was found in my pocket where I had thrust it when running. Two cartridges were empty. Two shots had been fired! No explanation would have any weight in the face of such evidence. Some of the rougher element were for hanging me on the spot, but wiser counsel prevailed and I was locked up for the night."

"In the morning I was tried before a local magistrate. Now that Miss Payne was dead, I knew that divulging her story would do no harm, and might perhaps save my life; so I told it. It had no effect, however, on the minds of a prejudiced jury, especially as no man named Lasalle was known in the town. It was evident Lasalle had an alias."

"I was sentenced to be hanged the next morning! The company, who believed in my innocence, visited me during the day and tried to cheer me.

I passed the night praying for courage to meet my fate like a man. In the morning I was brought from the jail and taken about half a mile out of town. A halt was made in front of a large tree and a rope was thrown over a lower limb. The noose was adjusted around my neck and my hands tied behind my back. At my own request my eyes were not bandaged. The signal was given! The noose was drawn taut and with a jerk I was swung into the air."

"O God! What a sensation! I went through twenty hells in as many seconds! The last thing that met my swimming sight was a horseman dashing up the road! My head seemed bursting and there was a horrible roaring in my ears! Then I heard something like a faint report. The next instant I went sinking, sinking into space! Then there was a sudden shock! I knew no more!"

"When I came to, I was lying at the foot of the tree. The crowd surrounded a man who held a rifle. When I had recovered sufficiently I was informed of the cause of my sudden bringing back to life. The rope by which I was suspended had been cut in two by a bullet from the rifle of the man who had ridden up so hurriedly."

"This man, Jim Winters, lived among the hills about two miles from the other side of the town. The night before a man had fallen at his door apparently in a dying condition. Winters carried him into the hut and found he had been shot in the back. It was Lasalle, known to Winters as Duvalle. He was suffering agony, and thinking he was near death, confessed the story of the shooting to Winters.
Winters, who had heard of my predicament, hastened to town, to inform the authorities of the real culprit. When he heard of the hanging he rode like mad to stop it. As he thundered down the road and saw me swinging, he shouted and raising his rifle, fired—and saved my life."

"I was brought back to jail, to be kept there until the truth of Winters' story could be proved. A deputation, among which was a doctor, was sent with Winters, and Lasalle's ante-mortem statement was taken. After an examination, however, the doctor told Winters that the wound was not a fatal one, and that the man would recover. A gleam from Lasalle's eyes warned the doctor that the conversation had been overheard, so he cautioned Winters to be careful lest Lasalle should make an effort to escape. Winters laughed and said he guessed he could hold his own against a wounded man."

"That afternoon I was released.
When the miners heard that Lasalle would recover they vowed vengeance.
A party started out the next morning at sunrise to take him from Winters' cabin and hang him to the nearest tree."

"When they arrived there, they found Winters lying on the floor dead.
A bullet hole in the back of his head told the tale. Winters' rifle and Lasalle were both gone. It was marvelous how he escaped, wounded as he was; but I suppose desperation aided him."

"Did he leave no trace?" I asked.
Carrington paused.
"No," he replied. "Jack Holmes, though, who played with us, was in Canada a few years ago. I met him last summer. He told me he could have sworn he saw Lasalle once for a moment in a crowded street in Toronto."

"Who keeps the grave here in such good condition?"

"You?"

"Yes, Clarke. I loved her."

"He was silent for a moment and then went on—

"Yes, I loved her. I have been accused of lack of ambition because I have refused New York engagements.
But what is ambition when there is no one to share its rewards with you?
I prefer to play out here where I once played with her. As I go over the old circuit I am reminded of her, and that is my happiness."

I grasped his hand in sympathy and we rose to depart. As we started to our feet we noticed a man kneeling at the foot of Alice Payne's grave. Suddenly he took a pistol from his pocket, raised it to his head and fired. He fell face downward on the grave."

We rushed to him. Carrington reached him first and raised him. As he did so he cried—

"My God! it's Armande Lasalle!"

He dashed!—Waverley Magazine.

A Charm that Failed.

Major P. H. G. Powell-Cotton had some unique experiences during his twenty months of travel in little known districts in Africa. In telling of the superstition of the natives he says:
"Among the week's washing I had given my boy a vest, which when the other things came back was missing.
He made some excuse about mending it, and I thought no more of the matter till in the early morning I happened to catch sight of two of my men bringing it back from the direction of a Swahili trader's camp. Some time afterward I learned that one trader was regarded as a great worker of charms. The vest had been taken to him, and he had been asked to cast such a spell over it that when it next touched my skin any desire I might have of going far afield would melt away. When the charm was of no effect the explanation given by my men was that before leaving England I had acquired witchcraft potent enough to render their magic powerless."

Speaking of sure things, there is, in addition to death and taxes, the rent collector.

DARING RAILROAD PROPOSITION.

ROUTE OF THE RAILROAD TO KEY WEST.

The sort of railroading which appeals to the public mind, by reason of its daring and by the new problems which it often presents to the engineer, is that through mountain regions, but it has remained for Henry M. Flagler, who has been termed "The Wizard of Florida," to take in hand some railway construction which is not only unique, but daring to the last degree.
This task is the extension of his Florida East Coast Railway, which has for some years been in operation between St. Augustine and Miami, 154 miles southwestward and northwestward from the latter point to the important island of Key West. The construction of the extension is proceeding rapidly.

The road will traverse for a considerable distance a ridge or slight elevation of aeolian limestone, and passing beyond this will reach sand, the mangrove, that strange tree which reaches its roots downward into the water from the limbs above being for a long distance the principal vegetation.
Then the road will strike considerable stretches of water, more or less shallow, but always the foundation will be one of the finest and most substantial imaginable, namely, coral rock.

The construction will be of the most expensive and durable character, and everything will make for absolute safety. The first survey was for a line to Cape Sable, but when this was made Mr. Flagler found that he was sixty miles from Key West and twelve miles from what is known as the three fathom line of the gulf. He therefore decided to undertake the greater proposition, and so changed the line from Homestead and is building more nearly along what may be called the general line of the coast.

In a scenic way this road will be notable. The views it will give of those beautiful southern waters, with all their tenderness of tint, with the scores of "keys" or islands and inlets, great and small, will make it like a voyage in wonderland. The line will pass from key to key, and the first deep water it will strike will be at what is known as Knight's Key, where there will be a channel thirteen feet in depth.

Several drawbridges will be constructed, some for the use of the small vessels which are engaged in the sponge fisheries, the seat of the sponge trade being Key West.

TACTFUL MR. TAKAHIRA.

Japanese Minister to America Rose from the Ranks.

The career and experience of To-goro Takahira embraces most of the varied changes in modern Japanese history, says the Review of Reviews. In his early youth he felt keenly and deeply
the ancient feud-
life of samurai and shogun, and when Japan abandoned the old order and set her face toward the new he swung into and developed with the new national life. Mr. Takahira is a fine example of the diplomat and gentleman of the Far East. His culture and training are many-sided—he is learned in Chinese philosophy and literature, he is a thorough scholar in the intricate literature of his own country, and he speaks and writes fluently in several European languages.

Mr. Takahira is not of the titled class—he has risen from the ranks.
Entering the imperial diplomatic service in 1870, after a thorough education at the Japanese capital, he was appointed attaché to the Japanese legation in Washington, becoming secretary of that legation in 1881. Two years later he was appointed secretary of the Foreign office. Later, he held a number of important posts, including those of charge d'affaires in Korea (1885), consul general at New York (1891), minister resident to Holland (1892), minister to Italy (1894), minister to Austria (1896), vice minister for foreign affairs (1899) and vice minister to the United States (1900).

The Japanese minister is a man of middle age, of a strong, well-built frame, but broken somewhat from his experience of last winter, when he was operated on for appendicitis. Tactful and diplomatic, a dignified dip-lomate through and through, Mr. Takahira has creditably represented Japanese interests throughout the present difficult period of the war. He has only courageous expressions of appreciation for the admirable qualities of the Russian people, whom he understands thoroughly. He does not look for peace in the near future, but says that Japan is quite ready and prepared to continue the conflict as long as may be necessary. As to the possibility which has been suggested of a Russo-Japanese alliance after peace has been concluded, Mr. Takahira declares this can never be. The Japanese people, he points out, have been educated, politically, along Anglo-Saxon lines, and it would be very difficult to change this national bent. A Franco-Russian alliance might be possible, but a Russo-Japanese alliance never.

No Reason for Two Trips.

Patrick's wife was "ailing," and Patrick put on his Sunday best and walked four miles to the doctor's house to tell him about her.

"Now," said the doctor, when he had heard all Patrick had to say, and had prepared some medicine, "here is something for your wife. I've written the directions on the bottle, and I want her to try it faithfully for a fortnight. Then, if it doesn't relieve her, come to me again, and I will give you another prescription."

"Now, doctor, see here," said Patrick, standing straight and looking grimly at the physician. "If you have your doubts of this curin' Mary, as it's trident you have by the way you spoke, why don't you give me first what you're goin' to give me last?"

When Expense Did Not Count.

Mamma—Have some more sugar, Willie?

Willie—Why, you always tell me that more than one spoonful is bad for my health?

Mamma—That's at home. You're at a hotel now—take all you want.— Cleveland Leader.

The average father talks so much about his "assessments" that the children know about them. His "assessments" go to his lodge, and are really premiums on his life insurance.

Be careful what you say to some people. (N. B.—On second thought we have decided not to use that word "some.")

Little Lessons in Patriotism

JAMES G. BLAINE. The first question to be determined in the measures of the reconstruction was that of the basis of representation upon which the States who had joined the Confederacy should be readmitted to the Union. Thaddeus Stevens had proposed that representation should be apportioned according to the number of legal voters. James G. Blaine, who had already been noted for his fairness in seeing both sides of the Southern question, strenuously objected to this proposition and urged that population, instead of voters, should determine the apportionment. So insistent was he upon his plan that, although Stevens was really the leader of the House, Blaine succeeded in securing the adoption of his plan, embodied in the fourteenth amendment.

Again, in 1867, when Stevens reported the reconstruction bill that divided the Southern States into five military districts and that practically established military government in them, Blaine opposed the measure, declaring that he was unwilling to support a measure that would place the South under military government, if it did not at the same time prescribe the conditions under which the people of these States might, by their own action, re-establish civil government.

Time has shown the wisdom of the course of Blaine as right showed the justice of it at the time that he proposed it to Congress.

LAST RESTING PLACE OF THE BONES OF ADMIRAL JOHN PAUL JONES.

With impressive ceremony, accompanied by the highest naval honors, the body of John Paul Jones, on its arrival in this country, was laid in the crypt of the magnificent new chapel now nearing completion at the Annapolis naval academy. Special Ambassador Loomis, flanked by Admiral Sigsbee and a brilliantly uniformed staff, presented the remains of the great admiral to the land for which he did such valorous service, and they were received with a naval salute and a specially prepared funeral service. The new chapel, a central feature of the reconstructed naval academy group of buildings recently ordered by Congress at a cost of many millions, rises on the water front with a massive dome for its inspiration, the architecture of the whole being not unlike the Hotel d'Invalides of Paris, in which rest the remains of the great Napoleon. The crypt of the chapel is intended for a last resting place of the bones of the nation's naval heroes.

Classes for Stammerers.
An interesting addition to the course of instruction in the public schools of Vienna is made by providing classes in four districts to overcome the defects in speech of children who stutter. The length of the course is five weeks and instruction is given during two hours of each weekday. The number of pupils to each class is limited to eight. The children are to withdraw from other school attendance, as it is essential that they devote themselves exclusively to the course for the cure of stuttering.

CLEMENTINA GONZALES, OF CENTRAL AMERICA, RESTORED TO HEALTH. PE-RU-NA THE REMEDY

Miss Clementina Gonzales, Hotel Provincia, Guatemala, C. A., in a recent letter from 247 Cleveland Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I took Peruna for a worn-out condition. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night, had no appetite and felt tired in the morning."

"I tried many tonics, but Peruna was the only thing which helped me in the least. After I had taken but half a bottle I felt much better. I continued its use for three weeks and I was completely restored to health, and was able to take up my studies which I had been forced to drop. There is nothing better than Peruna to build up the system."—Clementina Gonzales.

Had Kept Nothing Back.
There were six of them, each in a new gown, says the New York Sun reporter. It may be that the gowns only looked new to the newspaper man, but at any rate the young women were quite content with themselves and each other as they boarded a Broadway car. They had very little regard for the dull routine and commonplace details of life.

The announced intention of all was to transfer to Thirty-fourth street, and to this end the girl in the red hat got six transfers. But the other five changed their minds before they got to the transfer point, and declared themselves in favor of a shopping foray. Only the girl with the red hat stuck to the original plan and boarded the Thirty-fourth street car. To the conductor who came to take her fare she handed the bunch of transfers—the original six.

The conductor looked at her, and on each side of her, and all round her. She was oblivious. Then he said, "Where are the others?"
The girl looked up, startled and confused for an instant. Then she spoke, with cold dignity.
"That's all the transfer man gave me," she said.

COMMANDER OF THE G. A. R. Gen. Blackmar Was a Brave Soldier and Sterling Citizen.

Devotion to the duties of his office and his interest in the welfare of the G. A. R., of which he was Commander-in-chief, and which led him to sacrifice his health, were largely responsible for the death of Gen. Wilmon W. Blackmar, who passed away recently in Boise, Idaho, while on a tour of inspection of the Grand Army posts of the Northwest. Two weeks before General Blackmar, whose home is in Boston, broke down and was ordered to his bed at his summer home in Hingham. He improved rapidly, however, and decided to continue his trip in the West, which he had begun early in the year. Upon reaching Idaho he again failed rapidly to the end.

General Blackmar was born in Bristol, Pa., July 25, 1841. While a boy the family moved to Boston. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted as a private in the Fifteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, and with his regiment was at Antietam, Stone River, Chattanooga, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. He was promoted until as a lieutenant he was transferred to the First West Virginia Cavalry, one of Custer's famous regiments. It was while holding this position, and while only 24 years of age, that he performed the act which made him known as a gallant soldier the country over. Near Five Forks, April 1, 1895, he was ordered to form a new line at a critical stage of action, while the men were being pressed back. He carried out this instruction and then, without orders, advanced the line, calling upon the color bearer to follow. The call was repeated, the line advanced, the charge was made and the enemy routed. This audacious and brave action was witnessed by Custer, who promoted him on the field to a captaincy.

General Blackmar remained at the front until the close of the war and was present at the surrender of General Lee at Appomattox. After the close of the war he returned to Boston and later graduated from Harvard College. For ten years he was advocate general of Massachusetts. He was the first commander of Post 113, G. A. R., of Boston, and was a prominent member of the Loyal Legion. Gen. Blackmar was elected Commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. at the last National Encampment, held in Boston in August, 1904.

John Hyde, chief of the bureau of statistics in the Department of Agriculture, resigned, declaring that the cotton growers had organized to force him out of the department and that his health was too poor to enable him to continue the struggle. Secretary Wilson said that Mr. Hyde has not been implicated in any manner in the irregularities that resulted in the dismissal of Edwin S. Holmes, the associate statistician, charged with being guilty of giving to brokers advance figures of cotton crop statistics. Hyde's letter of resignation was almost sensational.

Earthly Pleasures. — Can earthly pleasures make one so happy as to leave nothing to be desired. Assuredly not. Tale of Orange Blossom.
The wearing of orange blossoms at a wedding is accounted for in various ways. Among other stories is the following popular legend from Spain: An African king presented a Spanish king with a magnificent orange tree, whose creamy, waxy blossoms and wonderful fragrance excited the admiration of the whole court. Many begged in vain for a branch of the plant and a foreign ambassador was tormented by the desire to introduce so great a curiosity to his native land. He used every possible means to accomplish his purpose, but, all his efforts coming to naught, he gave up in despair.

The fair daughter of the court gardener was loved by a young artisan, but she lacked the dowry which the family considered necessary to a bride. One day, chancing to break off a spray of orange blossom, the gardener thoughtlessly gave it to his daughter. Seeing the coveted prize in the girl's hair the wily ambassador offered her a sum sufficient for the dowry, provided she gave him a branch and said nothing about it. Her marriage was soon celebrated, and on her way to the altar, in grateful remembrance of the source of all her happiness, she secretly broke off another bit of the lucky tree to adorn her hair.

Whether the poor court gardener lost his head in consequence of his daughter's treachery the legend does not relate, but many lands now know the wonderful tree, and ever since that wedding day orange blossom has been considered a fitting adornment for a bride.

John Hyde, chief of the bureau of statistics in the Department of Agriculture, resigned, declaring that the cotton growers had organized to force him out of the department and that his health was too poor to enable him to continue the struggle. Secretary Wilson said that Mr. Hyde has not been implicated in any manner in the irregularities that resulted in the dismissal of Edwin S. Holmes, the associate statistician, charged with being guilty of giving to brokers advance figures of cotton crop statistics. Hyde's letter of resignation was almost sensational.

Earthly Pleasures. — Can earthly pleasures make one so happy as to leave nothing to be desired. Assuredly not. They that indulge in sensual gratification are forced to acknowledge that the deeper they plunge the more they are enslaved and the less they are satisfied by them. The keen edge of delight soon becomes blunted.

Unrest.—Society is full of unrest and discontent because of the exaggerated estimate put upon material possessions. Side by side with great strenuousness in the pursuit of health there is, on the part of many who have achieved or inherited fortunes, increasing luxury and self-indulgence. This is reproduced in varying degrees, in every stratum of society, from the most to the least wealthy.—Rev. P. S. Moxom, Congregationalist, Springfield, Mass.

Stewed Beef.
Cut the beef into inch square pieces; four each; cut a small carrot, a small turnip, and a large onion into slices, put the fat you trimmed off into a deep spider or a saucepan, let it get very hot, lay in the vegetables, cover, and leave them to brown (not burn), stirring occasionally. When they are all nicely browned, pour on them a pint of boiling water, and lay in the meat; put with it a moderate teaspoonful of salt and one-half saltspoonful of pepper, with two or three coarse stalks of celery, if you have them, cut fine. Let all stew very gently for two hours at least, or until the meat is quite tender, but remember, if it has boiled or stewed fast, it will never be that, nor would it if you made your stew of tenderloin. Skim free from fat and serve.

Blackberry Sponge.
Soak one-half box of gelatine in a half cupful of water. Wash one quart of blackberries and add to them one-half cupful of sugar; boil together for twenty minutes another half cupful of sugar and the same amount of water. Rub the berries through a fine sieve, add the gelatine to the boiling syrup, and after removing from the fire add the berry juice. Place the dish in a pan of ice water and beat with the egg-beater for fully five minutes; then add the beaten whites of five eggs and whip until the mixture begins to thicken. Pour into wet molds and set on ice. Serve with cream.

MALARIA A Poison Breathed into the System

The air arising from low, marshy places, damp cellars, stagnant ponds and pools and from decaying vegetable matter, as well as the gases from sewers, is loaded with germs of malarial poison. The water we drink, that has not been properly filtered and purified, is also full of these germs and microbes, and as we daily breathe and drink millions of these into the system, to be absorbed by the blood, the entire body begins to feel the effects of the poison.

The most common form of Malaria is "chills and fever," but when the blood is thoroughly saturated with the poison it becomes so weak and polluted that abscesses, carbuncles, boils, sores, ulcers, and other skin diseases result. Malaria also affects the liver, kidneys, bowels and stomach, producing a chronic state of biliousness that often results in jaundice or some malignant fever. In cases of Malaria the blood must be purified before the body can regain its natural health. S. S. S. contains purifying and tonic properties possessed by no other blood medicine, and is the ideal remedy for the treatment of Malaria. It destroys the germs of the disease and builds up the weakened, polluted circulation. It enters into the blood and forces out every particle of poison and waste matter and adds strength and activity to it.

S. S. S. improves the appetite and digestion, tones up the entire system by its alterative and purifying action, and Malaria, with all its bad effects, is permanently driven from the system. — Book on the blood and any medical advice, without charge. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

Why Hoosier Drills a Perfect Sowers

A Perfect Drill is impossible without a feeding device that will sow the grain evenly under all conditions. The ordinary gravity feed sows by weight. The greater pressure on the feed opening when going up hill makes it sow more than when coming down, when this pressure is removed; the same on side hills. NOT SO ON THE HOOSIER. It has Perfect Force Feed; sows by measure, consequently always sows the same; and pressure does not affect it. Enlargement in the Feed Cup just where the Feed Roll takes hold of the seed prevents cracking. Write for "The Feeding of the Seed in Hoosier Drills." That tells all about it.

To Sentinel Readers.

Having been assigned to other duties, I have associated with me my son, Geo. C. L. Snyder, who will assume the management and watch over the destinies of the SENTINEL. George is a novice at the newspaper business, is a thorough printer, and being young may infuse new life into the concern, though in policy the paper will remain the same—"Justice and fairness to all." Thanking the patrons for their liberal patronage and asking for a continuance of the same, I remain yours, truly,

A. V. R. SNYDER.

In assuming the management of the SENTINEL, as stated above, I shall make no changes in the policy of the paper. Neither will I be presumptuous enough to say that I will give the readers a better paper than has been given them in the past. I will put forth every effort to give you the best that can be produced under existing circumstances, and will always be found trying to promote and enhance the best interests of the patrons of this paper.

Following the teachings of pater familias, the paper will bear the republican banner, but will not be partisan to the extent of allowing things political to serve it from the path of defending the interests of Alaska, Wrangell District in particular.

The columns of the paper will always be open to any reader for discussion of topics of interest, we, however, reserving the liberty of making such comment as we choose in any communication of discussion that may come in.

People of a town in an undeveloped country should, in our opinion, work together in harmony, and strive to benefit themselves not only individually, but collectively. Outside people coming in to invest their capital or engage in business, should be given every possible encouragement. Thus will the town grow and prosper. This is historically true. In our endeavors to this end, we solicit the assistance of all; let's get our shoulders to the wheels of progress, and work as a unit for the advancement of the best town in the best country on earth, Wrangell, Alaska. Respectfully,

Geo. C. L. SNYDER.

Among other items of injustice that are heaped upon Alaska through laws that appear to be prejudicial against persons entering certain lines of business, is that controlling the wholesaling of liquors within the district. A license is fixed, but it is next to prohibitive, being $2,000 per annum. This is not fair. Liquor will be sold and liquor will be drunk in Alaska, and as long as this is the case it is but fair that dealers in this district should be allowed to dispose of it wholesale, at as reasonable a license as those on the outside. The Juneau Liquor Co., at Juneau, would be pleased to enter the field as wholesalers; but with that $2,000 staring them in the face, they are shut out; and outsiders reap the benefit.

Friday, September 22, the U. S. survey ship Gedney ran onto the rocks in Wrangell Narrows, and was pulled off by the steamer Excelsior. Perhaps if a few government vessels would wreck in these treacherous narrows—entailing a loss of perhaps millions of dollars and possibly many lives—the government might be induced to "lock the barn door" and take some interest in improving the Dry Straits, and thereby insure a safe passage for vessels at all times.

After chewing on the neck of an old bull that had been shipped from Seattle to Juneau, Frame, of the Transcript, got "nutty" and broke loose in this strain: "Tuff Eaton is the name of a man running a restaurant in Wrangell. We have met a number of his brothers in the same business in different towns in Alaska." Of course, as Mr. Frame generalizes in the last part of his item, we can hardly take it as personal and forgive him for his thrust at Wrangell.

The Cablegram says that the richest strike of gold ever found in the Sitka district has just come to light on Chigachik Island and that the lame, the halt, the blind—all except the Mission school teachers—had stampeded to it. One man says the ore runs thousands of dollars to the ton.

More than 1,000,000 alien immigrants entered the United States during the past fiscal year, nearly 800,000 of whom entered at the port of New York. According to an official of that state, New York absorbed 263,000 of these immigrants during the year, of whom 38 per cent were Italian, 23 per cent Hebrew, 6 per cent each of German, Irish and Polish, 5 per cent Scandinavians, and the balance of other nationalities. Their occupations were given as follows:

Professional.....	1.2 per cent
Merchants.....	2 " "
Farmers.....	2 " "
Skilled mechanics.....	8 " "
Farm laborers.....	21 " "
Servants.....	12 " "
Laborers.....	25 " "
No occupation.....	25 " "

A SOUND paper tells in thrilling terms how two Alaska men staggered down the gang plank of a steamer with leather bags containing $102,000 in gold. The paper could have saved adjectives by merely mentioning that bullion of that value weighs nearly 800 pounds, and readers could figure out the staggering to suit themselves.—Gateway.

When you are called upon to reply to letters of inquiry concerning Alaska, it is not necessary to magnify, and tell of lemonade springs, rock-candy mines or ice cream caves. Just the plain, unvarnished truth is sufficient. Invite people to "have a look," which will convince them that there is no country like this.

BETWEEN JANUARY 1 and August 15 of the present year, there was shipped through Seattle by the Alaska-Pacific Express Co., gold dust to the value of $6,377,133. During the same period of 1904 there passed through Skagway, $6,405,305, a difference in favor of last year of $68,172.

That Petersburg will some day be one of the greatest fishing centers on the coast, can not be gainsaid. Many thousands of dollars worth were shipped from there last year, and we believe from present evidences of activity that this year's output was only a drop in the bucket in comparison with what it will be the coming season. Already the waters are full of fishing snags that have come up from below to "harvest the crop," and the trawlers are cooing of the hardy men of the sea who are hoping to reap a rich reward. May their fondest hopes be realized as it means much for Alaska.
